

Access to Health Records Information Sheet for Patients/ Applicants Under:

- (a) Data Protection Act 2018
- (b) General Data Protection Regulation (GDPR) 2018
- (c) Access to Health Records 1990 (deceased patients only)

Background to the Regulation

Data Protection Law gives individuals a right to access their personal health records.

People who can apply include the patient / service user about whom the records have been compiled or a person acting on their behalf.

The Access to Health Records Act 1990 allows the personal representative of a deceased person, and any other person who has a claim arising out of their death, to access health information relevant to that claim.

Your rights

As a patient / service user you have the right to access and receive a copy of the personal health information that the Trust holds about you.

The Trust may withhold any information that would be likely to cause harm to the physical or mental health of any person, or if it identifies a third party who was not involved in your care.

If you think you may not have received access to all of your information you can ask the Access to Records team to review your request.

If you think there are inaccuracies in your record, you can ask for corrections to be made. You are entitled to a copy of the correction or a copy of the holder's comments if the record is not amended.

If you are not satisfied with the way your request has been handled, you can complain, in the first instance, to the Complaints Team within the Trust. If your complaint is not resolved, you can complain to the Information Commissioner's Office, Wycliffe House, Water Lane, Wilmslow, Cheshire, SK9 5AF
Telephone: 0303 123 1113 Website <https://ico.org.uk/>

Patient confidentiality

You have a right to expect the Trust to maintain the confidentiality of your information. This duty of confidentiality extends after a patient is deceased. The Trust is therefore obliged to be satisfied that the person requesting access to personal health information is either the patient or is otherwise entitled to have access to that patient's records. Along with their request, the applicant will have to provide proof of their identity. Where the applicant is not the patient, the applicant is also required to provide confirmation that they are entitled to access the information, for example, a letter of consent from the patient, power of attorney or, where the patient is deceased, proof that they are the patient's personal representative, for example, grant of probate or letters of administration. People with a claim against the estate of a deceased patient can gain access to information that is relevant to that claim.

How long will it take to provide me with a copy of my records?

The Trust is required by law to review health information prior to disclosure. We endeavour to respond to requests within 30 days, but the UK General Data Protection Regulations allows the Trust up to three months to respond where records are complex and the Trust requires additional time to review, collate and supply the information.

Access to the records of deceased people should be provided within 40 days (or 21 days where information was recorded in the 40 days preceding the date of application).

How will I receive copies of the records?

Records will be provided electronically via email in a password protected document. If you do not have access to a computer and requires paper copies, please let the Access to Records team know and we can post the records out or they can be collected in person.
