Flowchart

1. Introduction

Workplace stress can be a major factor in reducing staff performance, commitment, motivation, productivity, and increasing sickness absence plus absenteeism. The Health and Safety Executive (HSE) considers stress to be consistently one of the most commonly reported work-related illnesses. Current legislation also encompasses requirements to manage stress at work.

This policy sets out the Trust's aims in relation to the management of workplace stress, and in ensuring that, where reasonably practicable, employees who experience stress are helped, whatever the cause of that stress.

The initial implementation of the policy will be monitored through the Trust's Workforce Plan and associated governance processes. On an on-going basis, regular audits will take place to monitor compliance with the policy.

2. Scope

This policy applies to all employees of the Trust.

3 Purpose

This policy sets out the Trust's aims in relation to the management of workplace stress, and in accordance with its duties under the Health and Safety at Work Act 1974 and the Management of Health and Safety at Work Regulations 1999. It aims to ensure that, where reasonably practicable, employees who experience stress are helped, whatever the cause of that stress.

The Trust places high value on maintaining a healthy and safe environment for all of its employees and seeks to minimise the causes of stress in the workplace through the risk assessment process.

The Trust aims:

To increase levels of understanding and awareness in the Trust about the causes and effects of stress, and the actions that can help to reduce workplace stress.

To support managers to identify the possible sources of workplace stress at the earliest opportunity through timely, effective risk assessment, in addition to other sources of information.

To support managers to effectively manage the causes and effects of workplace stress.

To provide information and training that will assist employees in identifying and managing stress in others and themselves

To encourage employees to seek help and support, and to see this as a positive step.

To provide a confidential employee counselling service.

To improve attendance rates and reduce sickness absence relating to workplace stress through early identification and avoidance of absence and supporting the return to work of employees who have experienced absence due to stress.

4 Definitions

'Stress' – 'the adverse reaction people have to excessive pressures or other types of demand placed upon them' (Health and Safety Executive). This makes an important distinction between pressure which can be a positive state if managed correctly enhancing job satisfaction, motivation and performance, and excessive or negative stress which can be detrimental to health.

The effect of pressure on any individual is moderated by a variety of factors including support systems at home and work, personality and coping mechanisms. What may be too much pressure for one person at a specific time may not be for another or even for the same person at a different time.

The symptoms of stress include those that are emotional (depression, anxiety, tension, irritability, fatigue and low self-esteem), physical (headaches, high blood pressure, disturbed sleep patterns) and behavioural (absence from work, avoidance of tasks, withdrawal / isolation, and poor job performance).

'Workplace stress' – the adverse reaction people have to excessive pressures or other types of demand placed upon them in the workplace.

5 Detail of the policy (title needs to be changed as appropriate)

The broad overview of this policy is described in the introduction of this policy.

6 Duties

To ensure the effective implementation of this policy the following roles and responsibilities are identified:

The Director of Human Resources will take overall executive responsibility for and lead on the implementation of the policy.

The Human Resources and Workforce Group will monitor the initial implementation of the policy through the Workforce Plan.

The Director of Human Resources will ensure regular analysis takes place to monitor stress at work by means of the annual Staff Survey or otherwise and will ensure that the policy is reviewed on a regular basis.

Director of Human Resources will ensure that the service provided by Occupational Health and Workplace Wellbeing through contract negotiations and service specifications supports the implementation of the policy.

Following implementation, managers are responsible for carrying out stress risk assessments as appropriate, and that as far as reasonably practicable, appropriate and timely actions and strategies are put in place to reduce or remove the causes of workplace stress. Where identified risks cannot be managed at a local level, this should be reported to the relevant Director for further consideration.

Following implementation, Service, Clinical and Support Directors and where appropriate, Executive and Associate Directors are responsible for ensuring that stress risk assessments are carried out within their areas of responsibility as appropriate, and that as far as reasonably practicable, appropriate and timely actions and strategies are put in place to reduce or remove the causes of workplace stress.

Directors and managers must be aware of the employee support services available, particularly the employee support service provided by Workplace Wellbeing, and be in a position to direct employees to such services.

Employees have a responsibility to recognise pressure and where possible to take early action before it develops into stress. Employees should notify their manager if they feel that stress is affecting their health and/or work performance, and whether this relates to workplace stress.

Employees should also be proactive in seeking support and utilising the available sources of support as appropriate.

Human Resources Department staff will:

Give advice to Directors and Managers on the Stress Management at Work policy as appropriate, assist Managers in liaison with Occupational Health colleagues and staff side representatives as appropriate.

Assist in Identifying potential 'stress hotspots' in the Trust from sickness absence statistics, feeding back to line managers and advise on actions and strategies.

In collaboration with or addition to other qualified sources of expertise, advise managers on interventions to support the management of workplace and other stress.

Support Managers as appropriate to facilitate the return to work of employees following periods of stress related illness.

Provide advice and guidance to Managers in organisational change processes on how to minimise the occurrence of workplace stress.

7 Procedure

A risk assessment tool that identifies the sources of stress experienced by individual staff members is available by the Stress at Work Tool kit. This policy should be read in conjunction with the Stress at work tool kit. It is a standalone tool for ease of use and can be found on the intranet under the Trust policies.

The questions used in the Stress at work tool kit are designed to gather information on the six stress factors included in the HSE risk assessment model as set out below:

- a. Demands This factor relates to the demands of the job as a whole. Jobs have many features or characteristics such as how much work they involve, the amount of control over tasks, the variety of tasks involved, the support and help available and feedback provided.
- b. Control This factor refers to the amount of say staff have over how their work is carried out.
- c. Relationships This factor refers to the way we interact with other people at work. Relationships with managers, peers and others at work can have a major influence on how an individual feels at the end of the working day.
- d. Role This factor refers to the individual's understanding of their role in the organisation, the group or the team which should be clearly defined and understood.

- e. Support This factor refers to the range of formal and informal activities undertaken by management that support the work of staff.
- f. Change This factor refers to organisational change, whether large or small, and how this is managed and communicated in the organisation.

Where management action is required to address the risks identified this will be included in an integrated plan which should include the following information:

- The identified risks
- Management action required
- Support/expert advice needed – Medical advice (referrals to OH, any reasonable adjustments), Health and Wellbeing
- Key target dates for actions to be taken
- Arrangements for feedback to employees, team/department
- Date for reviewing action plan

Where stress risk assessments are carried out, the outcomes will be reported by Managers to the relevant Director to enable the Director to carry out their duties as detailed above.

8 Injury Allowance

The injury Allowance recompense employees who have temporarily lost income due to an injury or illness as a result of work. Information on the injury allowance can be found in the Promoting attendance and managing sickness absence policy appendix M.

9 Development, Consultation and Approval

This policy review has been consulted with all union representatives and HR colleagues for comments and approval.

The key changes to the policy are job titles due to organisational change.

This policy was consulted at JPG on October 2021 and PGG 20 December 2021

The policy will be subject to regular review and monitoring (see “Duties”,5 above).
